One great defect with our civilization is that it does not know what to do with its knowledge. Science, as we have seen, has given us great power, yet we use them like small children. For example, we do not know how to manage our machines. Machines were made to be man's servant; yet he has grown to be so dependent on them that they are in a fair way to become his master. Already most men spend most of their live looking after and waiting upon machines. The machines are very stern masters. They must be fed with coal and given petrol to drink, and oil to wash with, and must be kept at the right temperature. And if they do not get their meals when they expect them, they grow sulky and refuse to work. Do we have to do what they want to keep them in good temper. Already we find it difficult to work or play without machines and a time may come when they will rule over us altogether.
